

Pablo A Guerron

Boston College; Amazon Scholar

Pablo A. Guerron-Quintana is a Professor of Economics at Boston College and an Amazon Scholar. He holds a Ph.D. in Economics from Northwestern University and has diverse educational credentials spanning a Ph.D. in economics and electronic engineering from institutions in the United States, Mexico, and Ecuador.

Previously, he served as Senior Economic Advisor at the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia. He currently serves as Chief Economist at Quinso Economic Consultants, where he advises institutional clients including Federal Reserve Banks, the International Monetary Fund, and various central banks worldwide.

His research spans macroeconomics, monetary policy, international finance, time series forecasting, and machine learning applications in economics. He has published extensively in top economics journals and maintains an active research agenda that bridges classical econometric methods with modern machine learning approaches for macroeconomic forecasting and analysis.